

one day

counting the sunshine
the new unbearable spring
the waiting grass
but in the other world
we can step out of all this
all these memories
all these affections
into new borders
and new departures
freed from the terrible responsibility of being somebody
to the uplands of shepherds forever herding
seeing a wildflower bloom
on the warm breeze
give me one more day